

FOR REGISTERED INVESTMENT ADVISERS

Your clients keep asking for things you can't staff.

The insurance renewal. The contractor who will not call back. The K-1 that has not arrived. The rental that needs a decision this week. You deflect these politely because you cannot staff them — and every time you do, a piece of the relationship goes to somebody else. A Titan Expert joins your team and takes them: on your platform, under your brand, reporting to you.

A specialist joins your team, without a hire

A named Titan Expert works your households as an extension of your firm. No recruiting, no training, no salary, no management overhead. They introduce themselves as part of your team, because for that household they are.

You stay the relationship

The Titan Expert reports to you, not around you. Every call made and document handled sits on your record, under your brand. You are never told about your own client second-hand.

Your advisors get their week back

The platform assembles the report and tracks the renewal; the expert runs what is left. Your people go back to advising, which is what you hired them for.

You finally see the whole balance sheet

Properties with their lenders, taxes, insurers and vendors. Entities, valuables, obligations, cash flow. Advice improves when you see everything a family owns, not the part you custody.

Say yes to what you deflect today

The property tax appeal, the lapsed endorsement, the vendor nobody is chasing, the trust that was never funded. Each of those is a chance to be indispensable, and today each one is a polite no.

A moat, not a feature

Hold the document vault, the renewal calendar and the vendor register, and a competitor is no longer pitching against your performance. They are asking a family to rebuild its operating life. That is a conversation they lose.

Your centres of influence become a channel

The client's CPA and estate attorney get their own portal into the household you share. You become the hub of the professional network around that family rather than one spoke in it.

Continuity that belongs to the firm

When a household moves to another advisor internally, or the next generation takes over, nothing important lives in one person's head. And your brand is on all of it — clients never see the word TitanOS.

WHO PAYS, PLAINLY

Billed to the household, and priced to cover the platform and the expert's time. It is not a mark-up for your firm and it does not come out of your advisory fee. What you get is not a margin line — it is a household that is very hard to take away from you.

WHERE THE CONVERSATION USUALLY STARTS

Ask a client with a rental what they pay their property manager. The standard is 8–12% of gross rent, and 15–20% once tenant placement and maintenance mark-ups are counted. On $300,000 of rent that is $30,000 to $60,000 a year — to somebody who does not report to them and has never spoken to you. Your Titan Expert takes that call instead.

See it on a real household, with real documents, in twenty minutes.
